Major rural broadband bill clears the Colorado Senate, heads to House

Colorado Politics

A bill that could put up to a hundred million dollars into financing rural broadband cleared the Colorado Senate last Thursday morning with changes its sponsors say will speed up the process.

Senate Bill 2 would take dollars from a fund that currently pays for landlines and shifts that over five years to pay for internet service to rural communities left out of Colorado's economic boom. The Senate sent the bill on to the House with a 30-5 vote.

The money that would go to rural broadband would come from what's known as the High Cost Support Mechanism (HCSM), a state fund that takes in a 2.6 percent surcharge on phone bills. The fund's support has dwindled in the past few years as more people shift away from landlines and exclusively toward cell phone service. However, the HCSM still takes in about $35 million per year. Most of those dollars, around $30 million per year, currently go to CenturyLink.

Denver chamber to drop ballot question to raise state sales tax for roads

Colorado Politics

The Denver Metro Chamber of Commerce will submit paperwork within the next week to get on the ballot in November with a sales tax to fund transportation across the state.

The chamber leads a statewide coalition proposing one of three potential requests to voters: for 0.50 cents, for 0.62 cents or a full penny, Chamber President Kelly Brough told Colorado Politics.

She said which question amount would depend on the state revenue forecast that comes out in mid-March, as well as the outcome of the current legislative session; lawmakers are considering legislation to put more money from the state budget into transportation.

"We think it's important to find out what the state can contribute before we finalize what the right number is to ask voters to finish the work," she said.

The half-cent sales tax is expected to raise about $500 million a year - 45 percent for interstates and state roads, 40 percent for cities and counties and 15 percent for transit.

Bill requiring paid leave for workers gets 1st OK in Colorado House

Denver Business Journal

A bill to create an employee-funded system of extended paid leave for workers at all Colorado companies began its fourth journey in the state Legislature last Tuesday, even as Senate Republican leaders showed no signs they are more open to the idea than in previous years.

House Bill 1001, sponsored by Democratic Reps. Faith Winter of Westminster and Matt Gray of Broomfield, would assess a fee of about 0.33 percent on every worker's paycheck and use the proceeds to create the Family and Medical Leave Insurance (FAMLI) program within the Colorado Department of Labor and Employment.

The funds in that program would partially replace the wages of employees who take leave from their companies to care for a newborn child, a family member with a health emergency or their own significant health problems.

Proposed initiative to limit new housing on Front Range ignites fears in real estate industry

Daily Camera

A ballot measure to cap home and apartment construction along Colorado's Front Range is undergoing a formal state review, setting off alarm bells with real estate agents and homebuilders.

"This will bring our economy to a halt. You don't bring affordability to a market by reducing supply," Scott Thorson, the chief operating officer at Oakwood Homes, said at the Colorado Association of Realtors' Economic Summit on Wednesday in Denver.

Ballot initiative No. 66, which is awaiting a review from the Colorado Supreme Court, would limit permits for homes and apartments to 1 percent of the existing housing stock in 2019 and 2020 in Adams, Arapahoe, Boulder, Broomfield, Denver, Douglas, El Paso, Jefferson, Larimer and Weld counties.

Nashville, Tenn., February 12, 2018 - HCA Healthcare (NYSE: HCA), a leading healthcare provider with 179 hospitals, 120 freestanding surgery centers and numerous other healthcare facilities, has been named for the ninth consecutive year as one of the Ethisphere Institute's World's Most Ethical Companies. The Ethisphere Institute is a global leader in defining and advancing the standards of ethical business practices. HCA is one of only eight healthcare providers honored on this year's list.

"HCA was founded on trust, integrity and a common mission to care for and improve human life," said Milton Johnson, HCA's chairman and chief executive officer. "This honor is a reflection of our commitment to demonstrate these shared values every day and support our 50-year tradition of caring for our patients and the communities we serve."

Throughout its 50-year history, and in the face of historic disasters, HCA has served its patients, partners and communities with dignity and respect. During hurricanes Harvey and Irma in 2017, HCA caregivers treated approximately 12,000 patients; HCA donated $1 million to the American Red Cross to support communities in need; the HCA Hope Fund, the company's employee assistance nonprofit organization, gave grants of $3.4 million to help thousands of affected employees; and HCA colleagues donated nearly 9,000 hours of paid time off to support coworkers who needed time away from work to rebuild their lives.

HCA also provided charity care, uninsured discounts and other uncompensated care at a cost of $2.8 billion in 2016 (the most recent data available). HCA's culture of inclusion continues to support the delivery of culturally competent care, with affiliates using more than 160 languages and dialects to communicate with their diverse patient populations. With approximately five percent of all hospital services in the U.S. occurring at an HCA facility, the company uses data from its more than 28 million annual patient encounters to advance science, improve patient care and save lives.

"We are honored to have once again been recognized as one of Ethisphere's World's Most Ethical Companies," said Alan Yuspeh, HCA's senior vice president and chief ethics and compliance officer. "It's a recognition of our 240,000 employees who maintain a positive work environment and build and maintain trust with our patients and communities."

The World's Most Ethical Company assessment is based upon the Ethisphere Institute's Ethics Quotient® (EQ) framework which offers a quantitative way to assess a company's performance in an objective, consistent and standardized way. Equifax hack inspires Colorado clampdown on credit reports
Colorado Politics

Colorado lawmakers began laying the bricks of a firewall for consumers who might be victims of identity theft as a result of such breaches as the Equifax hack last year. They started with children and at-risk adults.

Most children don't have credit histories, and often their clean credit is used in "family fraud," by someone who knows the child or at-risk adult.

The State, Veterans, and Military Affairs Committee voted 7-2 to pass House Bill 1233, sponsored by House Speaker Crisanta Duran and Republican Rep. Polly Lawrence.

"Securing personal information is a growing priority for adults," parent Jessica Duke told the committee. "And it should be for children, too."

Reps. Tim Leonard, R-Evergreen, and Stephen Humphrey, R-Severance, voted against the bill "for today," because they want to be sure the legislation doesn't create a credit report for a child simply by a parent asking the credit reporting agency if one exists.

The bill appears broadly supported, however.

Colorado governor candidates differ on affordable-housing solutions

Denver Business Journal

Two of Colorado's leading gubernatorial candidates clashed last Thursday over the proper role of the state government in alleviating the ongoing affordable-housing crisis.

Meanwhile, several Republican hopefuls for the office said the solution must lie in cutting regulations and working with the private sector to address mushrooming costs for homes.

Four Democratic and three Republicans hoping to succeed term-limited Democratic Gov. John Hickenlooper spoke at a forum held by the Colorado Association of Realtors.

The discussions came as housing needs continue to out-pace new housing supplies, leaving home prices soaring and an estimated 25 percent of Coloradans spending 50 percent or more of their income on housing.

Former GOP Rep. Tom Tancredo Drops Out of Colorado Governor's Race

Washington Free Beacon

Former Colorado congressman Tom Tancredo is dropping out of the Colorado governor's race, citing fundraising issues as the reason.

"I do not want to win a primary and lose a general, and I fear that was where we were going," he told Colorado Politics, which first broke the story late Tuesday.

Tancredo has at times closely resembled some of the hallmark political traits of President Donald Trump: an immigration firebrand with a populist touch who has also made controversial remarks while showing a disdain for political correctness.

Democrat Mike Foote launches campaign for Boulder DA whether he's appointed or not

Colorado Politics

State Rep. Mike Foote, a Lafayette Democrat, last Wednesday said he's running for Boulder County district attorney whether he wins appointment to the office later this month or not.

Gov. John Hickenlooper plans to name a replacement by March 1 for Boulder County District Attorney Stan Garnett, who announced last month he's stepping down after 10 years as the county's top prosecutor to take a job with a law firm.

Foote, a deputy district attorney under Garnett, is one of three applicants for the position to have announced interest publicly. The others are Michael Dougherty, the assistant district attorney for Jefferson and Gilpin counties and a Democrat, who suspended his campaign for attorney general last week to pursue the job, and Tim Johnson, a deputy district attorney in the office and also a Democrat.

Colorado marijuana sales hit a record $1.5 billion in 2017

Colorado Politics

The Colorado Department of Revenue says marijuana shops in the state made a record $1.51 billion in sales of medical and recreational cannabis, edibles and concentrate products in 2017.

Data released last Friday say adult-use sales topped $1.09 billion during the year, with the remaining $416.52 million coming from medical marijuana.

The state says Colorado collected upward of $247 million in taxes and fees revenue from marijuana sales. The previous record was in 2016, when marijuana shops did $1.3 billion in sales. Sales were $996 million in 2015.

Molson Coors executive appointed as Colorado labor department chief

Denver Business Journal

Colorado Gov. John Hickenlooper has dipped into the private sector for yet another Cabinet member, appointing former Molson Coors Brewing Co. executive Sam Walker to be executive director of the Colorado Department of Labor and Employment.

Walker is just the second person to serve in that role under the Democratic governor, replacing Ellen Golombek, who announced last September she was stepping down. Golombek remained with Hickenlooper from this 2011 inauguration until late last year. Hickenlooper is term-limited and will leave office in January 2019, making it likely this will be his final appointment for the key role.

Golombek oversaw reform of the state's insolvent Unemployment Insurance Trust Fund and negotiated numerous deals with business leaders involving the enforcement of laws assuring payment of wages by businesses and the clarification of which workers are contractors versus full-time employees.
